

I feel that this proposed rule will be burdensome. First, it will require 2 to 3 thousand dollars to buy the computer, the software, and pay an engineer to make it all work. Secondly, it will require archiving and care to make sure it is running properly. But besides that, why should a station that has never had an obscenity complaint filed against it need to do this? The commission is letting the bad actions of a few broadcasters punish all the many good broadcasters. Finally, the burden of proof should be on a person filing a complaint.
